REFERENCES

- 25X1 1. Since the end of September 1953, relations between Albania and Yugoslavia have entered a new phase. Frontier incidents which had considerably increased, were resolved in a friendly manner and it is expected that diplomatic relations between the two countries will be regularized shortly. Yugoslav army units have been removed from the Albanian frontier.
2. Artillery units at Kacanik and Kosovo are the only ones still active. In addition, Yugoslav aircraft which regularly flew over Albania air space for provocative reasons, have not been seen for a month.

- 25X1 [] Comment: Resumption of relations between these two countries now seems very likely in view of the settlement of the frontier questions between the two countries on December 11, and the Soviet policy of easing the tensions between the satellites and other nations in the Balkans.
